The CURRICULUM:

Developed by nationally recognized public health leaders, the University of Miami, and the de Beaumont Foundation, BEAM is a self-paced, interactive, 15- to 20-hour course built around these six interconnected learning priorities:

Strategic Problem Definition

Budgeting

Procurement

Contracts

Contract Monitoring

Financial Health

Upon successful completion of the program, students receive a BEAM Certificate signed by the deans of the University of Miami medical and business schools.

I love that BEAM is an online, self-paced course with an abundance of materials and quizzes and visual and audio tools to accommodate all types of learners. It is also helpful that the course uses a unique case study that highlights the different challenges we face working in a public health environment. By taking this course, you will be better equipped to manage projects, programs and budgets and to increase your effectiveness in delivering public health services.
